

Screening as part of

JEWISHFILM.2007

The National Center for Jewish Film's
10th Annual Film Festival
@ Wasserman Cinematheque, Brandeis University

My Mexican Shivah

Morirse Esta En Hebreo

Saturday, April 14, 8:30 pm

SNEAK PREVIEW

Special Guest:
Author Ilan Stavans

Feature Film, Mexico, 2006, 98 min, 35mm
Spanish, Hebrew & Yiddish w/ English subtitles
Director: Alejandro Springall

According to Jewish folklore, from his or her birth a Jew is accompanied by the angels of light and darkness. When Moishe Tartakovsky dies, these divine accountants calculate his soul's direction into the afterlife by eavesdropping on the mourners gathered in an apartment in Mexico City. Moishe's eternal rest might be in jeopardy as his shiva guests include a roomful of plotting friends, his vain daughter, bankrupt son, newly-Orthodox ex-con grandson, and Catholic ex-lover. All the while, a man from the sacred funeral society is charging for kosher food and shiva goods and a troupe of mariachi musicians waits to play. This wry comedy drama—based on a story by Ilan Stavans and produced by John Sayles—features an original score performed by The Klezmatiks.

SPONSORS: American Jewish Committee, Greater Boston Chapter; Levine Chapels, Brookline

For Tickets & More Information: WWW.JEWISHFILM.ORG or 781.736.8600

CHAPELS
LEVINE

THE JEWISH ADVOCATE